The Freddie Steady 5-Live from SugarHill Studios

The bells and whistles on the big beautiful boards at SugarHill Studios are state-of-the-art, bringing to life any sound that any musician creates within its sound-proofed walls.

But lots of recording studios have that. What makes SugarHill special is the warmth, the feel, the living room vibe that brings out the best in any artist. Then there's the history. The Big Bopper's "Chantilly Lace," Roy Head's "Treat Her Right," Freddy Fender's "Before the Next Teardrop Falls," Willie Nelson's "Night Life," Lightnin' Hopkins' "T-Model Blues," and the quintessential Texas contribution to rock and roll, the Sir Douglas Quintet's "She's About a Mover." All were recorded at Houston's SugarHill. Freddie Steady Krc knows rock and roll history. He's been making his own ever since seeing the Sir Douglas Quintet when he was ten. The spirit of Sir Doug power pops right off the tracks that the Freddie Steady 5 made in that historic studio in 2009. This artist and this room, together at last. Call it destiny.
